ALUMNI NOTES.

RECORDS.

It will be of interest to the alumni to know of the plan by which the University keeps up with her children. This task is no small one, and must from the nature of the inquiry in many cases be imperfectly performed. But it is a matter of satisfaction that a definite plan is in operation upon which all further inquiry may be based.

The Registrar's office has been recently equipped with a modern card index filing case, and the Registrar is now engaged in making a complete card catalogue of all the 12,000 ex-students and alumni of the University. A card is allotted to each name and presents at a glance the student's parentage, his connection with the University, his present address and occupation, and his life history since leaving the University. No fact of any importance in the life of any alumnus or ex-student comes to the notice of the Registrar that it is not entered immediately upon the University's record.* Thus the University cares for her own and follows them with the same enthusiastic devotion, be they of '83 or '03. The Registrar, according to credible reports, has some other tasks, and be he ever so assiduous and observant a reader of a number of daily and weekly newspapers, and write he ever so many letters, many facts of interest escape his notice. Every ex-student should co-operate with him, sending in from time to time any news that he or she may have.

LIFE SECRETARIES.

A movement has been recently set afoot by the class of '03 and '04 in the election of class secretaries, who hold office during the period of their natural lives and of good behavior, which movement, it is believed, will materially aid the Registrar. The graduating classes are now becoming so large and are so early and so widely scattered that members soon lose sight of each other in the hurry of business, and only small coteries keep in touch with each other. A secretary, who can resign only by dying, becomes a central bureau for the class. An occasional circular letter brings him information of his class-mates, which is always available to each member, and which at stated intervals should be printed. Class-mates are thus bound together and bound to their mother institution.

UNIVERSITY PUBLICATIONS.

As an effective agency for disseminating information of interest to the alumni and ex-students, the University publications will increase the space and attention given to the alumni of the University. The alumni mailing list will be enlarged as addresses are verified. All of the publications of the University which appeal to ex-students, and are free, will be sent out to them regularly upon request.

The editorial board solicits the suggestions and co-operation of the alumni in its efforts to make aggregation out of segregation. The University for her part is sparing no means that will contribute to this end.

Considerable comment has been caused in University circles by the following sentences from the report of a recent interview, in a Fort Worth paper, with Dr. J. T. Wilson, President of the State Medical Board of Examiners. Speaking of the effects of the law regarding the examination of applicants for the medical profession, Dr. Wilson said: "Another effect the law has had has been to force medical colleges which draw patronage from this State, to raise their standard. It is a most serious reflection on a medical school to have one of its graduates turned down by a medical examining board. We have not yet turned down a single graduate of a Texas medical college. The State University at Galveston has turned out some men who have made remarkable averages." This testimony is in line with the published statements of the Secretary of the Board, made before a committee of the last Legislature, and it is a source of extreme gratification that the opportunities for preparation for the medical profession, given by the University, are unexcelled.

* The figures for 1903-04 are brought down to January 16, 1904.

** Irregular students are now grouped with the regular classes but distinguished in the catalogue by the abbreviation (Ir.).

† The large decrease in the number of special students is due to the fact the Junior Law students taking one Academic course (which is a requirement of the law curriculum) are no longer grouped with Academic Specials.

‡ Graduate work in law has been abandoned since 1900-01.
